GRADING

- Each department has different guidelines in regards to grading expectations of Teaching Assistants
- There is no University numeric to letter grade scale
- The scale for your class should be indicated on your syllabus
- Unless returned to students, final papers/exams should be retained at least through the following semester

FERPA gives certain rights to students to have their information protected as private, and to make decisions regarding their education records (and the contents of those records).

In postsecondary education, these rights belong to the students, regardless of age or dependent status.
Instructors are urged to keep their students informed as to the quality of work which they are doing but should use proper precautions to see that no student's record is made known to other students.

Class grades must not be posted so that a student may identify another students' grades
GRADING PRIVACY & FERPA

- You may not speak to a parent or any other representative of a student in regards to an assignment or final grade for a course.

- You may speak to a “University Official” with a “Legitimate Educational Purpose” in regards to student grade information.
